

A B S T R A C T

An aeroplane provided with noise-reducing means for reducing the noise level that is produced during a flight, in particular during the landing stage of the aeroplane, due to the presence of the landing gear of the aeroplane, said sound-reducing means comprising deflection means for deflecting an air flow away from the landing gear or at least from components thereof, characterized in that the deflection means comprise blowing means provided with a blowing element having at least one blowing nozzle for creating an air screen at the front side of the landing gear, or at least components thereof, from said at least one blowing nozzle.